Instructional Methods

One of the major benefits of the 6 month provisional is the opportunity to work with other people — both those who are like you and those who aren't. This fall, you'll work with three or four other students to complete a major collaborative communication project. This will challenge you to find ways of working productively with people from other Indian communities and to discover how to deal with both the drawbacks and rewards of writing in a multi-disciplinary context. Various collaborative works will follow with a workshop / discussion format. You should be prepared to meet with your collaborative group outside of regular class hours. We may spend some time discussing topics and theories that relate to your work in progress, but the amount and nature of that discussion will depend on what you need to know to complete assigned work. Part of your responsibility in this course is to identify issues you want me to explain and discuss.

Ground Rules

Successful collaboration requires considerable cooperation as well as respect for the differences among team members. Team members must listen well, be sensitive to others, and offer encouragement and constructive suggestions for improvement. Above all, collaborators must learn to negotiate and compromise in the best interests of the group and the achievement of the team's goal. You must agree to cooperate with each other and should assign responsibilities at the outset. If a team member isn't fulfilling his or her responsibilities, work as a group to encourage that person to participate. If you don't succeed, one option is to make an appointment for the team to ask me to mediate.

PLEASE NOTE: Failure to complete two consecutive major assigned work will be grounds for a final course grade of “Incomplete”.. If you cannot complete an assignment, you must COMMUNICATE with me or your designated leader.. Otherwise, you risk falling into an “incomplete”. You can’t pass the course if you don’t complete it.

Because this course emphasizes revision and recollection on topics, I encourage you to use a computer and to save all documents on disk.

Attendance and Participation

Attendance is mandatory. Your listening and learning may depend on in-class/ online activities. In addition, I'll explain assignments in class, hand out related materials, and discuss and clarify assigned readings. Much in-class / online time will be spent working within groups on the collaborative project. Missing class during that time will hurt not only you, but your group as well.
